Maybe One Day LLC Announces launch of MID® Green

MID®Green clothing line to support alternative carbon neutral fuel development

Houston, TX— June 10, 2008 — Maybe One Day LLC announces the launch of the M1D® Green. M1D® Green is a line of t-shirts introduced to raise money to encourage and support research in alternative fuels and alternative transportation. Each t-shirt sold will raise $5.00 for the M1D® Green fund. Our first design is currently available at our online store at www.m1dgreen.com.

One of the most promising energy sources that we have seen is bio fuel derived from algae. Fuel from algae is a truly renewable resource. Algae based biofuel is also ideal as it does not compete with food crops and does not require the use of agricultural land. Valcent Products Inc. has been developing technologies to grow algae on a mass scale. They are developing technology to produce 100,000 barrels of algae based biofuel per acre per year. This compares to 30 barrels per acre per year for corn. We really believe this will be a significant portion of the alternative fuel solution. Because of this we will be sending Valcent 75% of the funds from MID®Green to support their work. When the technology is perfected and economically feasible it will be possible to build facilities to grow algae for fuel. This will allow the US to become energy independent and also make a massive reduction in carbon dioxide emissions.

The remaining 25% of the funds from MID®Green will go to Houston Based REV. REV provides green transportation in Downtown and Midtown Houston. Their goal is to provide affordable and convenient urban transportation via all electric/zero emission vehicles.

Their service allows more people to live without the need to own a car in a city designed around the car. M1D® Green will support the operation and expansion of REV by providing 25% of funds raised for their operation.
